

Getting Bob Beck's Pick-up Running

On January 18, nine members met at Bob Beck's home to check out the motor and start on his Model A pickup. The motor had not ran in a few years. Bob had disassembled some of the motor for inspection. Everything looked OK so we started the assembly.

With two members under the car and three working on top and changing places every so often, all went great.

Now was the time of truth. The motor turned over (great), not starting. There was no gas to the carburetor. A different carburetor. Ran. Kind of. Shorty touched it with his magic fingers. It sounded better. With a few minor adjustments, it was a Model A again.
